Changing Political Complexion of the United States Senate. Accidental events as well as the progress of public sentiment favor the Democratic party. The death of Senator Morton diminishes the slender and waning Republican majority in the Senate, and his Democratic successor will be an addition to the strength of the other side. Senator Patterson, of South Carolina, who is under indictment for felony, is likely to lose his seat by expulsion, and his successor will be a Democrat. Senator Davis, of Illinois, who attended the Senatorial caucus of neither party, will probably act with the Democrats in questions where they have right and justice clearly on their side. If the Democratic claimants from Louisiana and South Carolina are admitted to seats, the long Re-publican ascendancy in the Senate is gone, and the Democratic party will have a majority in both branches of Congress. It is certain enough that the Democrats will control the Senate during the last two years of Precident Hayes' term, and there seems almost an even chance that they may gain this advantage in the Forty-fifth Congress. This possible change in the party composition of the Senate is of so much interest that it may be worth while to look into it. The following classified list contains following classified list contains the names of all Senators entitled to seats on the day of Mr. Morton's death, with the single omission of Senator Davis, of Illi-nois, whose independent position does not permit him to be arrayed on either

By the death of Senator Morton and the certainty that the Governor of In-the certainty that the Governor of Indiana will appoint a Democratic suc-cessor, this slender Republican majority of six is reduced to four, and to three as often as Judge Davis votes on the Demo-cratic side. If Patterson, of South Car-olina, should be expelled, the Republi-cans will have only a majority of two on critical occasions and of only one after Patterson's Democratic successor is seated. With Sharon, of Nevada, absent, as he feels at liberty to be a great part of the time, the Republican majority would be annihilated as soon as Patterson is replaced by a Democrat, and the Senate would be brought to a tie on political questions. But a tie would not destroy Republican control, since the Vice President, who is a Republican, has a casting vote whenever the Senate is equally dicans to an absolute minority, when the casting vote of the Vice President cannot help them. Louisiana is not represented in the Senate at all, and South Carolina has but one Senator. These three seats belong, of right, to the Democrats, and if the Democratic claimants are admitted the Republican majority in the Senate is hopelessly gone for the whole of Hayes'

If the Republican Senators are unscrupulous enough they may perhaps maintain their ascendancy during the Forty-fifth Congress by admitting Kellogg from Louisiana and keeping the other unfilled seats vacant. But this would be a hazardous experiment. Judge Davis would certainly vote against them in any attempt to perpetrate a manifest injustice. and perhaps also two or three Republican Senators who strongly approve of President Hayes' Southern policy. If the President was right in recognizing the Democratic State governments in Louisiana and South Carolina, the Democratic Senators from those States ought to be admitted. It is only necessary that two Republican Senators—say Mr. Christiancy and Stanley Matthews should vote with Judge Davis and the Democrats in filling the contested seats to establish a clear Democratic ascendancy in the Senate. The foregone certainty that the Democrats are to control the Senate during the last half of Mr. Hayes' term tends to discourage unscrupulous party zeal, and it is quite possible that the filling of the vacant seats may reduce the Republicans to a minority in the present Senate. When their very slender majority can be maintained only by a reck-less partisanship which overrides justice, and may be lost in any event by the refusal of barely two Republican Senators to go all lengths, the party is practically bankrupt in the Senate of the United States. If a merchant were reduced to such an extremity his credit would be

This narrow and vanishing Republican majority in the Senate is a great political fact which President Hayes cannot pru-dently ignore. The usefulness of his administration depends upon a reasonable support by Congress. He is in a very different position from that in which General Grant stood during the first six years of his administration, when he had strong Republican majorities in both houses. Beyond the mere routine of executive duties President Hayes can do little for the advantage of the country without the permission of his politica term certainly, and for the first half possibly, he will have to depend on Democratic votes to get his appointments confirmed, and no public measures which he may recommend to Congress can possibly pass without Democratic approval. If, therefore, he desires to promote the public weal he must abandon every thought of being a party President. He must attempt nothing which is not clearmust attempt nothing which is not clearly for the public advantage, and by adopting this simple rule he may win approval for a useful and perhaps even a brilliant administration. As he is pledged against seeking or accepting a second term he has no strong personal motive to sway him from a course dictated by high patriotism, and if he recognizes the opportunities put in his way by this unique situation he may leave our public affairs in a far better condition than that in which he found them. It is too evident that President Hayes' political party cannot help him. If he expects much of it he will lean upon a broken reed. For the last half of his term it will have no power in either branch of Congress, and even for the first half it is powerless in the House and fatally crippled in the Senate. This state of things opens a grand opportunity to the President if he is sagacious enough, has moral elevation enough, and political courage enough to improve it. for the benefit of the country. He can do what none of his recent predecessors have had any possibility of accomplishing. He can emancipate himself from all party ties, can rise superior to all narrow partisan views, and give us, for once in this generation, an administration con-ducted with an eye single to the public Oct 18, 1877

if he possessed the vigor of the late Sen-ator Morton combined with the political tact of Senator Blaine. There is an insuperable barrier to his success as a party chief in the great and growing Demo-cratic strength in Congress. There is but one successful course open to President Hayes, and that lies in the direction of reforming the abuses which have grown up during three generations of party control of the government. A sub-lime and beneficent mission if the President could be brought to see it! As a party President Mr. Hayes' hands are completely tied; but as a President of the people, seeking only their advantage and appealing only to their candor, hon-esty and intelligence for support, he has an opportunity to distinguish his administration from those of our long line of party Presidents, who have been con-strained by personal ambition or party necessities to do things which the judgment of impartial men could not sanction. President Haves is morally and politically free, and since his own party is powerless to help him, and the Democratic opposition shows no disposition to thwart him, he may leave a great mark on our public life if he rises to the full height of his opportunities.—New York Herald.

MY customers know that I have heretofore led the "Furniture" trade of the South, in style, quality and prices. The time has come when these goods can be purchased as cheap from me as in the North and West. I do not go backwards, but continually raise the standard of my goods, and add new styles. I have made reductions in prices wherever possible, and spared no expense to place in your hands a Price List that will help you to purchase goods. I respectfully invite you to call and examine my stock and prices before purchasing elsewhere. Orders by mail will receive as much attention as if given in person. It would make the list too large to describe and copy all the different prices of Bedroom, Parlor Suits, Dining Room, Office, Standing, Parlor and Ladies' Desks, Secretaries, Dwarf Libraries, and Book Cases, manufactured by me, and therefore, this list contains only a few of the prices of goods kept by me.

Thanking you for past favors, I remain, yours respectfully,

JAUNDICE is produced by obstinate ague, by catching cold; by the stoppage of customary evacuations; by an obstruction of the bile-duct, or by a severe blow over the region of the liver. It is easily recognized by the yellowness of the whites of the nized by the yellowness of the whites of the eyes. After a few days' discomfort, the roots of the nails, the face, neck, trunk and limbs become morbidly discolored. The urine is deep saffron in color, the bowels constipated, the appetite irregular. Languor, headache, and depression of spirits are more or less prominent. The disease may continue for weeks or months, or it may prove fatal as early as the fourth day. public that it will continue to realize the happiest results that can be desired. In almost every section of country there are persons, publicly known, who have been restored from alarming and even desperate diseases of the lungs, by its use. All who have tried it acknowledge its superiority; and where its virtues are known, no one hesitates as to what medicine to employ to relieve the distress and suffering peculiar to pulmonary affections. CHERRY PEC-TORAL always affords instant relief, and performs rapid cures of the milder va-rieties of bronchial disorder, as well as

This medicine gains friends at every trial, as the cures it is constantly producing are too remarkable to be forgotten. No family should be without it, and those who have once used it never will. Eminent Physicians throughout the
